

greenbuzz

edited by sarah jane lovett & giovanna durmal

SWEET THINGS

We love this – it ticks all the right boxes. The coolest, kindest lingerie range, Enema makes Agent Provocateur look actually a bit whorish and pedestrian. Set up with a grant from the Prince's Trust, it uses hemp, cotton, vintage prints and reclaimed fabrics for unique detail. Elegantly French and sexy it's made by subscribers in their own homes. Cream satin corset and bra set, £77, from enemalingerie.com

SHOULD I COCO?

At Coco in Edinburgh you will only find 'real chocolate' – in other words, antioxidant-rich chocolate with a high cocoa content and made with cocoa butter (instead of sugar, vegetable fat and powdered milk). An old-fashioned sweet shop, Coco makes its award-winning organic bars, truffles and creams made on site and stylishly wraps them in boxes and packaging designed by local artists. The dark chocolate champagne truffles (pictured) are made with fresh organic cream and surrounded by edible rose petals. £9.95, from coco.chocolate.co.uk

MADE FROM RECYCLED GLASS BEADS, PEACHES GELDOP'S CHARM BRACELET IS A QUIRKY AND COLOURFUL LITTLE GEM. THE KITENOELA GLASS PROVIDES KENYAN PEOPLE WITH A COMFORTABLE PLACE TO LIVE AND WORK. £35, FROM THENATURALSTORE.CO.UK

TAKE A LEAF

Treat tea lovers to a swish collection of Emeyu loose-leaf teas. The company was set up by Kristiana Blomqvist to market the finest Chinese green and white teas – delicate brews that command a serious price tag (Oolong tea called Phoenix Single Grove can set you back £25). Focusing on the philosophical side of tea drinking, Emeyu tells us 'that tea carries with it an ancient wisdom that clears the mind and enriches the spirit'. £53 for set of four, from emeyu.co.uk